

Mary Beth McMahon

Mary Beth has been involved with Special Olympics since 1983. She first started as a volunteer in Rhode Island and continued volunteering in Massachusetts upon graduating from Providence College. In 1991, she decided to pursue Special Olympics as a career, leaving the financial industry for Special Olympics Maryland. After stints in Maryland, Northern California and Nevada, she came home to Massachusetts in 2011 to become the Senior Vice President. In March 2013, she became the CEO. Today, Mary Beth oversees an organization that serves close to 12,000 individuals with intellectual disabilities with the help of over 10,000 volunteers in a year round training and competition programs across 24 sports. The youngest athlete participating is 2 1/2 and the oldest is 104. Special Olympics provides all this programming for free to all of its participants by fundraising annually 4.5 million net dollars. Mary Beth is married and a proud mother of 2 children.
